Overview

In addition to federal income tax issues, construction and operation of solar facilities also raise numerous state and local tax issues that should be carefully examined. Following is a general description of the types of issues that may arise, with selected examples. The owner of a qualified solar facility may claim the investment tax credit (“ITC”). The ITC is a one-time credit against income tax that is based on the amount invested in a facility (rather than on the amount of electricity produced and sold). The amount of the ITC for a qualified solar facility. The rules for commercial solar tax credits changed completely on July 4, 2025, when the One Big Beautiful Bill (OBBB) became law. This legislation rewrote the timeline and terms for federal clean energy incentives that businesses have counted on for years. For years, eligible businesses could claim. A major change is coming for commercial solar projects — and it could determine whether your company qualifies for the federal 30% Investment Tax Credit (ITC) for solar or loses it entirely. Starting January 1, 2026, new Foreign Entity of Concern (FEOC) rules take effect. These rules are designed. What Is the ITC for Solar?

The ITC for solar, or the federal solar investment tax credit, allows businesses, nonprofits, and homeowners to deduct a percentage of their solar energy system installation costs from their federal tax liability. Current Rate (2025): Businesses and nonprofit/commercial. In 2018, President Trump placed Section 201 tariffs on imported c-Si cells and modules. These tariffs were extended for another four years in 2022 and will end in February 2026. The first 12.5 GW of cells imported annually are exempt from Section 201 tariffs so that they can be used to assemble. — Following is a statement from Abigail Ross Hopper, president and CEO of the Solar Energy Industries Association (SEIA) on new Treasury Department guidance narrowing “Commence Construction” rules for energy tax credits: “The Treasury Department’s new guidance to further restrict energy tax credits.
